Policy and procedure for supporting students 'at risk'

University Partner Students

1. Purpose

- 1.1. To provide a policy and procedure for identifying and providing support for students whom Regent College London (the College) regard as 'at risk' of not completing their studies and achieving an award from one of our University partners.
- 1.2. To provide a policy and procedure for supporting students to complete assignments and achieve their award following their period of study at the College.

2. Background

- 2.1. Regent College London has been successful in recruiting the majority of its students from non-traditional educational backgrounds. The majority of these students are returning to education after a significant period when last in full time education. In some cases students may have a ten year or even longer period since last in full time education.
- 2.2. The College recognises the need to provide additional academic and tutorial support to students whilst studying full time by providing tutorial sessions before formal teaching of a session and the provision of a weekly tutorial periods. Experience has shown that students do not avail themselves of this additional support as much as recommended by the College.
- 2.3. The QAA Review for Educational Oversight report from the January 2014 visit and report from the 2016 Annual Monitoring visit identified this as an issue for the College with recommendations for the College to do more to identify students at risk in their academic studies and providing additional support to help them achieve.
- 2.4. The policies and procedures detailed below have been developed to help address these issues for students.

3. Definition and categories of 'at risk' students

- 3.1. Students who are classified as at risk are those who, for one reason or another:
 - show signs that they may not successfully complete their full time programme of study
 - have completed their full time study at the College but have outstanding assignments to submit or resubmit, in the case of referred work, to achieve an award
- 3.2. The College uses three main indicators that a student may fall into the at risk category. These are as follows:
 - Attendance The College has an Attendance & Engagement Policy. This is rigorously implemented with a four step process. This follows increasing levels of intervention following four, eight, or twelve cumulative unauthorised absences noted in any one term/semester. Consequences for the student range from notifying the Student Loans Company of their failure to attend through to withdrawal from the College.
 - b) Non-submission of coursework Normally students are required to submit coursework at their first attempt to a published deadline following the teaching of modules in a semester. Students who do not have approved extensions, using the extenuating circumstances policy, and do not submit one or more pieces of coursework may be considered to be at risk. This is especially the case where a student fails to submit any coursework to a published deadline. Level/module Leaders attempt to make contact with students who have not submitted coursework. The policies detailed below provide a more systematic approach. All students who have not submitted the required number of pieces of coursework at the end of the semester/term are invited for a meeting to determine their academic progression to the next semester/term. It is the responsibility of the Directors of Studies to organise in liaison with level and module Leaders, the Student Support Officer and administrative staff. Often there is a correlation between non-attendance and non-submission of coursework.

c) Non-submission of referred coursework - Students who do not submit referred coursework at the first or subsequent opportunity to a published deadline may also be classified as at risk. It is important that the College keep accurate records on non-submission of referred coursework and follows up students who do not resubmit. This is for the Directors of Studies to organise in liaison with level and module Leaders, the Student Support Officer and administrative staff.

4. Actions to be taken

- 4.1 The following actions should be taken for students deemed to be at risk of not completing their two year full time programme of studies:
 - a) Non-attendance rigorous operation of the College Attendance & Engagement Policy and follow up with students who do not attend for eight or twelve teaching sessions.
 - b) Non-submission of coursework Directors of Studies to work with level and module Leaders, the Student Support Officer and administrative staff to contact students and provide appropriate academic or pastoral support.
 - c) Non-submission of referred coursework Directors of Studies to work with level and module Leaders, the Student Support Officer and administrative staff to contact students and provide appropriate academic or pastoral support.

5 Use of pro-forma

5.1 The Students At Risk form should be used when students classified as at risk have a meeting with a member of staff, academic or administrative, of Regent College London. Completed forms should be given to the Student Support Officer who will maintain a record.
